MEDIATECH SOFTWARE WINS PRESENTATION MAGAZINE'S 2003 STANDING OVATION AWARD

Mediatech's MTSYSTEMCOMMANDER room control software has been awarded Presentation Magazine's 2003 Standing Ovation Award in the Presentation Delivery Tools category. The annual awards are selected after an extensive review of presentation systems products by editors, writers, and a panel of presentation industry experts.

MTSYSTEMCOMMANDER provides an affordable approach to centralized control of presentation and training environments. The newest generation of the Mediatech's MTXTENDER family of ActiveX control applications, MTSYSTEMCOMMANDER provides a user-friendly Graphical User Interface (GUI) for presenters to create multiple custom control screens on virtually any Windows-based PC. Users can then run the application and control media assets such as VCRs, DVD Players, Projectors, Lights, etc. from a laptop, desktop computer, or via LAN/WAN.

"MTSYSTEMCOMMANDER uses a simple scripting process, thereby doing away with costly programming. The user can easily build and modify screens without the cost of proprietary programming services." says Dr. Pete Riley, Mediatech's Vice President of Operations. "It is an affordable solution for those looking for a room control system on a smaller budget. We also provide an extensive free library of preprogrammed templates to control most equipment and hardware functions for our customers. If we don't have it, chances are we can find it for you" says Riley.

A cost-effective solution for budget-minded facility requirements, MTSYSTEMCOMMANDER includes a library of graphic icons and button libraries for ease of control screen building. MTSYSTEMCOMMANDER is currently shipping with a list price of $795.

Headquartered in Holly Hill, Florida, Mediatech (www.gomEDIATECH.com) is a privately held enterprise principally engaged in the research, design, development, manufacture and integration of advanced presentation and training systems, products and services.
